Monday I went with the Purdue Global Engineering group to some meetings around AMPATH. Introducing Dr. Lumkes to Patrick was very productive.

Tuesday the same group went out to Chep and Moi Universities for meetings all day about potential student projects. We got to see a biogas digester as well as the track that most of the olympians train on.

Wednesday morning the group went out to Empowering Lives! It was great to go out there again.

Here are a few pictures from around Eldoret town:

the road from IU House heading towards AMPATH

As you walk to AMPATH there is a construction site with a backhoe! (in the center back of the picture) from the back of the hospital grounds looking towards town

a building in town

more buildings in town

cereal at the supermarket -you can find a lot of packaged food a street scene at the edge of town the hospital has lots of beautiful roses (many other places do as well)

a rose tree -because it is warm year round, thus there is not the dormant period, plants just keep growing
